

The question was asked why there are more myocarditis complications in young males. I would suggest a simple mechanism.

Likely that young males with better developed muscles have likely more blood vessels in the deltoid muscles.

I don't know how but probably this could be able to be checked easily [ultrasound, CT scan, MMR . other techniques?]